

GENERAL, ARTHUR JHUN A. BSIT 2 A GEELECT- GENDER SOCIETY
REFLECTION ESSAY:

Gender and Society has opened my eyes to many things that I used to take for granted. Before this class, I used to think that gender roles were just natural, that women are always supposed to stay at home while men work, or that women should always act gentle and men should be tough. But after learning the difference between sex and gender, I now understand that many of these ideas are not biological facts, but are actually created by society.

One of the most important lessons for me was realizing how gender affects every part of our lives, from work and education to health and even laws. I learned that gender roles are taught from the moment we are born. For example, boys are given toy cars and guns, while girls are given dolls and kitchen sets. These small things shape how we think about ourselves and others as we grow up.

I also unlearned the belief that men are always more suited to be leaders or decision-makers. After reading about strong Filipino women in politics, work, and education, I started to see that women are just as capable as men. Sometimes, they are even better, but they are not always given the same chances. It made me realize how unfair society can be.

Another thing that really changed how I think is learning about the LGBTQ+ community. Before, I didn't fully understand what they go through. I used to think their lives were just the same as everyone else's, but now I see how much discrimination they face just because they are different from what society calls "normal." Hearing their stories made me realize how unfair people can be. It opened my eyes and taught me to be more respectful, kind, and accepting to everyone, no matter their gender identity or who they love.

Overall, this course made me more aware of how important gender equality is. It taught me that change starts with small things, like being fair, respectful, and standing up for others. I now understand that we all have a role in ending gender discrimination. I'm thankful for this subject because it didn't just give me knowledge, it changed the way I see the world and helped me grow as a person.
